Job description and terms of employment

Lund University announces one position as associate senior lecturer in Economics with focus on Financial Economics.

The position is full time, with placement at the Department of Economics, Lund University School of Economics and Management. The position as an associate senior lecturer is limited to a four year period with the possibility of a promotion to a permanent position as a senior lecturer if the person in question is eligible for such employment according to the requirements discussed below under Promotion.

The position involves both teaching (40%) and research (60%), and administrative tasks can also be included. Teaching can be at the undergraduate, graduate, and doctoral levels.

The scope of the position shall also provide an opportunity for training in teaching and learning in higher education corresponding to at least five weeks.

The salary range is between SEK 460,000 – 520,000 per year depending on qualifications. The salary will be renegotiated and at a competitive level within the specialization if and when the candidate is promoted to senior lecturer.

Subject area

The successful candidate must have proven competence and experience in financial economics.

Qualification requirements

Qualified to be employed as an Associate Senior Lecturer in economics, is a person who has been awarded a Ph.D. degree in economics or finance not more than five years before the application deadline. (Higher Education Ordinance Chapter 4, Section 4 a)

Since the research environment at the Department of Economics is highly international and since the position includes teaching in English, a good command of the English language is required.

Assessment criteria

A good ability to develop and implement high-quality research and good and broad teaching skills are the basis for the assessment of the position. The School of Economics and Management strives for a balance between research and teaching in all positions. Furthermore, the ability to collaborate with the surrounding society and to inform about research and development is also considered in the assessment.

The overall evaluation of pedagogical qualifications includes teaching experience and pedagogical skills.

In the overall evaluation of scientific skills, particular weight will be given to the applicant's publications or potential to publish in highly ranked journals with a high relevance for economics or finance using the international peer-review system. The ability to receive external research grants is also included as an assessment basis for scientific skills.

A Ph.D. degree or experience of two years or more at the post-doctoral level from outside of the Lund University School of Economics and Management is a strong merit.

Promotion

An associate senior lecturer can apply for promotion to a permanent position as a senior lecturer if she or he fulfills the eligibility requirements according to Lund University's employment rules 4.3.5 (<https://www.staff.lu.se/sites/staff.lu.se/files/lund-university-employment-rules-190618.pdf>) and the qualification requirements of the department and shows:

1. High scientific skills
 - a) The conditions below are based on the journal list published here: <https://nek.lu.se/en/journals>
 - b) Condition 1 (high quality). One of the following conditions must be fulfilled when it comes to publications:
 - i) 2 A
 - ii) 1 A och 2 B*
 - iii) 1 A*
 - c) Condition 2 (productivity and independence): The applicants needs at least 16 points from publications ranked as B or higher. A single authored publication has the following points; A*=20, A=10, B*=5, B=2 and b=1. Each additional author reduces the total number of points with 10 percentage units. Hence, an A-publication with three authors gives 8 points while the same article with five authors gives 6 points.
2. High pedagogical skills
 - a) At least 1500 hours of teaching (so-called clock hours, which includes preparations).
 - b) Five weeks of pedagogical education.
3. An ability to cooperate with the society outside academia and a high degree of collegiality.
